Preface

This list of names of The Fallen of Glasgow's East-end records some of the millions of victims of the bloodiest wars in world history. The names, extracted from 'The City of Glasgow Roll of Honour of The Great War' (1922) compiled by the late Kevin O'Neil, were subsequently checked against the CWGC site for date of death, grave reference and/or memorial panel reference and next of kin. Any errors or omissions are entirely mine. I need only add that I set myself an enormous task in extracting this list of names from the 18,000 recorded on The City of Glasgow Roll of Honour (1922). In striving for accuracy I have done my best. Having been born and bred in Bridgeton I was familiar with the street names and I must say I found it a poignant exercise one way and another, having walked many of those familiar streets in the distant past. Moreover, in remembering an Uncle, likewise raised in Bridgeton, who died at St. Julian during the Second Battle of Ypres in April 1915, the list became my personal tribute to the Fallen Heroes of Glasgow's East-end. Their gallantry is commemorated in this Casualty List of names of sons, husbands' fathers and brothers in localised clusters of death. The supreme sacrifice of the district is exemplified in the tragedy that befell the late Mr and Mrs Dunn of 527 Dalmarnock Road, Bridgeton whose three sons were killed in action. These brothers in arms namely, Private Colin M DUNN, 9th Bn. Cameronians (Scottish Rifles); Private Archie DUNN, 6th Bn. Cameron Highlanders and Lance Corporal Richard DUNN, 6th Bn. Cameron Highlanders fought died at the Battle of Loos (1915). Colin (23) and Richard (26) died 25th September. Elder brother Archie (35) died the following day. The names of these three, with no known grave, are inscribed on Loos Memorial, Pas de Calais, France. They have passed from the sight of men, but their names liveth forever.

"I have many times asked myself whether there can be more potent advocates of peace upon earth through the years to come than this massed multitude of silent witnesses to the desolation of war." (King George V, Flanders, 1922).

26779 Private ANGUS James - 2nd Bn. Highland Light Infantry. James died 1st July, 1916. Grave Reference: II. A. 13. Cabaret-Rouge British Cemetery, Souchez. Location: Pas de Calais, France. Cabaret Rouge was a small, red-bricked, red-tiled café that stood close to this site in the early days of the First World War. The café was destroyed by shellfire in March, 1915, but it gave its unusual name to this sector and to a communication trench that led troops up the front-line. Commonwealth soldiers began burying their fallen comrades here in March, 1916. The cemetery was used mostly by the 47th (London) Division and the Canadian Corps until August, 1917 and by different fighting units until September, 1918. It was greatly enlarged in the years after the war when as many as 7,000 graves were concentrated here from over 100 other cemeteries in the area. For much of the 20th century, Cabaret Rouge served as one of a small number of 'open cemeteries' at which the remains of fallen servicemen newly discovered in the region were buried. Today, the cemetery contains over 7,650 burials of the First World War, over half of which remain unidentified. Many different Commonwealth units served in this sector during the war and the cemetery contains the graves of British, Irish, Australian, New Zealand, Indian and South African soldiers, It is also the final resting place of over 70 officers of the Royal Flying Corps and Royal Air Force. Cabaret Rouge has a particularly close connection with the Canadian Infantry, however, hundreds of Canadians who were killed at the Battle of Vimy Ridge in April, 1917 were laid to rest here. In May, 2000, the remains of an unknown Canadian soldier were taken from this cemetery and buried in a special tomb at the foot of the National War Memorial in Ottawa, Canada. A focal point for remembrance, he represents more than 116,000 Canadians who lost their during the First World War. A headstone in Plot 8, Row E, Grave 7 marks his original grave. Private Angus resided at 194 London Road, Bridgeton.

8901 Sapper ANGUS Robert - 1st/1st (Highland) Field Coy, Royal Engineers. Robert died 24th June, 1915. Age 19. Grave Reference II.A.16. Lillers Communal Cemetery. Location: Pas de Calais, France. Lillers is a small town about 15 kms west-north-west of Bethune and the Communal Cemetery and Extension lie to the north of the town. From the Mairie in the centre of the town, head north on the D182, after 500 mtrs turn right on to Rue St Venant. The cemetery is a further 200 mtrs on the left hand side. Within the Communal Cemetery the commonwealth war graves are situated on the right hand side half way up the cemetery central path, and the Extension is at the far right end of the Communal Cemetery. Both cemeteries are signposted. Son of Matthew Angus and Catherine McD. McGregor Angus, 134 Claythorn Street, Calton.

313024 Private CAMERON John Stewart - 7th Bn. Gordon Highlanders formerly Cameron Highlanders. The Battle of Cambrai was fought during November and December, 1917. The attack began early in the morning of 20th November, 1917 and initial advances were remarkable, However, by 22nd November, a halt was called for rest and reorganisation, allowing the Germans to reinforce. From 23rd to 28th November, the fighting was concentrated almost entirely around Broulton Wood and by 29th November, it was clear that the Germans were ready for a major counter attack. During the fierce fighting of the next five days, much of the ground gained in the initial days of the attack was lost. For the Allies, the results of the battle were ultimately disappointing but valuable lessons were learnt about new strategies and tactical approaches to fighting. The Germans had also discovered that their fixed lines of defence, no matter how well prepared, were vulnerable. John died 4th December, 1917. Age 20. Memorial Panel Reference: Panel 10. France. Cabaret Rouge was a small, red-bricked, red-tiled café that stood close to this site in the early days of the First World War. The café was destroyed by shellfire in March, 1915 but it gave its unusual name to this sector and to a communication trench that led troops up the front-line. Commonwealth soldiers began burying their fallen comrades here in March, 1916. The cemetery was used mostly by the 47th (London) Division and the Canadian Corps until August, 1917 and by different fighting units until September, 1918. It was greatly enlarged in the years after the war when as many as 7,000 graves were concentrated here from over 100 other cemeteries in the area. For much of the twentieth century,

Cabaret Rouge served as one of a small number of 'open cemeteries' at which the remains of fallen servicemen newly discovered in the region were buried. Today the cemetery contains over 7,650 burials of the First World War, over half of which remain unidentified. Souchez is a village 3.5 kms north of Arras on the main road to Bethune. Steward DAWSON Frederick - Royal Navy - HMHS "Rohilla" (7.114 tons gross) built in 1906 in Belfast by Harland & Wolff. It was called up at the outset of WW1 and converted into a hospital ship. Sailing south through the North Sea at around 4 am on 30th October, 1914 "Rohilla" struck Whitby Rock, a reef at Saltwick east of Whitby. At the time there was a fierce gale and due to wartime blackout conditions no landmarks were visible. Although the ship was only 600 mtrs from shore, the treacherous conditions of the high seas and storm force winds made rescue difficult. Rockets with ropes attached were fired from the cliffs, but all missed - "Rohilla" had no rockets of her own. Due to the weather conditions Whitby's lifeboat could not be launched from the harbour, so it was carried by hand over an eight-foot seawall and across rocks so that it could be launched from the foreshore nearest the ship. Six RNLI lifeboats carried out a rescue operation lasting fifty hours, saving many of the 229 people aboard, but 85 lives were lost in the disaster. Amongst those rescued was Mary Kezia Roberts, who had survived the sinking of RMS "Titanic" just two years earlier in 1912. Steward Dawson resided at 135 Great Hamilton Street.

The Memorial encloses Pozieres British Cemetery which is a little south-west of the village on the north side of the main road, D929, from Albert to Pozieres. On the road frontage is an open arcade terminated by small buildings and broken in the middle by the entrance and gates. Along the sides and the back, stone tablets are fixed in the stone rubble walls bearing the names of the dead grouped under their Regiments. It should be added that, although the memorial stands in a cemetery of largely Australian graves, it does not bear any Australian names. The Australian soldiers who fell in France and whose graves are not known are commemorated on the National Memorial at Villers-Bretonneux. Son of Mrs E. Day, 20 Forrest Street Mile-end.

Fireman (Stoker) LIVINGSTONE William - Mercantile Marine Reserve. HMS "Princess Irene" William died 27th May, 1915. Age 21. No Known Grave. Memorial Panel Reference: Panel 9. Plymouth Naval Memorial. Location: United Kingdom, Devon. The Memorial is situated centrally on The Hoe which looks directly towards Plymouth Sound. It is accessible at all times. Copies of the Memorial Register are kept at the Tourist Information Office at Island House, 9 The Barbican, Plymouth. PL1 2LS, and also in the Naval Historical Section at Plymouth Library. The steamship "Princess Irene" was built to the order of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for their luxurious "Triangle Route" linking Vancouver, Victoria and the American city of Seattle. The ship was completed at Dumbarton, Scotland, in 1914 but, before she was able to leave for the Pacific, was requisitioned by the Royal Navy and converted into a Minelayer. Based at Sheerness in Kent, she was in the River Medway on 27th May, 1915 when she blew up without warning as a result of a catastrophic internal explosion. The HMS "Princess Irene" had a complement of 225 officers and men. Also on board were a party of 80 or so Petty Officers from Chatham in addition to 76 Sheerness Dockyard workers who were completing tasks prior to the ship's planned departure to lay her mines on 29th May. The sole survivor was one of the Chatham Dockyard workers, David Wills, who amazingly survived the explosion, but few bodies were found. Those that were located were buried in Woodlands Cemetery on Gillingham. The ship was blown to pieces and her remains, and the remains of those on board, were scattered over a wide area of the surrounding river and countryside. A memorial to those lost in both this and the Bulwark disaster is situated opposite Sheerness Railway Station. The cause of the disaster was thought to have been due to a faulty primer (pistol) although evidence at the Official Enquiry showed that the work of priming the lethal mines was being carried out (a) in a hurry and (b) by untrained personnel. The lower decks and keel of the "Princess Irene" remain more or less intact and have caused a degree of navigational problems to the large ships now using the eastern end of nearby Thamesport. At present there are no plans to raise her remains. Son of Mrs William Livingstone, 46 New Street East, Calton.

<http://www.memorials.inportsmouth.co.uk/southsea/naval.htm> On the night of 12th January, 1918 two Royal Navy destroyers, HMS Opal and HMS Narborough, were escorting the light cruiser HMS Boadicea on patrol against mine layers. There came a severe blizzard of snow and high winds that the destroyers were forced to return to base at Scapa Flow. Unable to see, a navigational error caused the ships to sail straight into the cliffs at Hesta Rock, just to the north of Windwick Bay, South Ronaldsay. There was only one survivor, Able Seaman William Sissons of HMS Opal. He survived by clinging to a cliff edge for 36 hours before he was rescued. 188 men died that night, either killed by the impact, drowned or died of exposure.

Fireman MCMAHON John - H.M.S. "Princess Irene" Mercantile Marine Reserve. John died 27th May, 1915. Age 19. No Known Grave. Memorial Panel Reference: Panel 9. Plymouth Naval Memorial. Location: United Kingdom, Devon. The Memorial is situated centrally on The Hoe which looks directly towards Plymouth Sound. It is accessible at all times. Copies of the Memorial Register are kept at the Tourist Information Office at Island House, 9 The Barbican, Plymouth, PL1 2LS, and also in the Naval Historical Section at Plymouth Library. <http://www/webrarian.co.uk/rnwm/> At about 11.14 on the morning of 27th May, 1915. Sheerness witnessed the destruction of the minelayer HMS "Princess Irene" which was on No.28 buoy about 3 miles WSW from the town centre. The ship had been built in Scotland in the previous year to the order of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company but was requisitioned and converted for Naval use before she could sail to the Pacific. The "Princess Irene" had a complement of 225 officers and men, three of whom were ashore that morning as the mines were being primed on the ship's two mine decks. Also on board were a party of 80 or so Petty Officers from Chatham in addition to 76 Sheerness Dockyard workers who were completing tasks prior to the ship's planned departure to lay her mines on 29th May. Without warning, the ship was blown to pieces and her remains, and the remains of those on board, were scattered over a wide area of the surrounding river and countryside. One of the Chatham Dockyard workers, David Wills, amazingly survived the explosion but few bodies were found. Those that were located were buried in Woodlands Cemetery in Gillingham, A memorial to those lost in both this and the "Bulwark" disaster is situated opposite Sheerness Railway Station. The cause of the disaster was thought to have been due to a faulty primer (pistol) although evidence at the Official Inquiry showed that the work of priming the lethal mines was being carried out (a) in a hurry and (b) by untrained personnel. The lower decks and keel of the "Princess Irene" remain more or less intact and have caused a degree of navigational problems to the large ships now using the eastern end of nearby Thamesport. At present there are no plans to raise her remains. Son of Mr and Mrs John Docherty, 40 King Street, Calton.
